Tell us a little bit about yourself. Please include any community involvement or personal philosophy.	Since stepping into real estate in 2017, I've had the privilege of helping over 400 families find their place to call home. I bring not only hands-on experience but also a strong academic foundation, having earned my MBA from the University of Oklahoma. That education sharpened my strategic thinking and deepened my commitment to ethical, community-centered leadership. I'm deeply rooted in both my professional and personal communities-serving as the volunteer chair of the OKCMAR homeless initiative, I'm passionate about creating pathways to stability and dignity for those in need. Family is at the heart of everything I do. I'm a proud mom of twins who will graduate high school in 2026, and our household wouldn't be complete without our two dogs and one very opinionated cat. Whether I'm hosting a broker's open or cheering at a school event, I bring the same energy: thoughtful, committed, and always looking for ways to uplift others. If I had to define a personal philosophy, it would be this: Be kind. Everyone has value. I believe in treating people with respect, listening with intention, and showing up with integrity-whether it's for a client, a neighbor, or someone navigating hard times.

What motivated your desire to serve on the OKCMAR board?

My decision to apply for the OKCMAR board stems from a deep commitment to community and a belief that meaningful change starts with showing up. The last 2 years as the volunteer chair of the OKCMAR homeless initiative, I've seen firsthand how collaboration, compassion, and strategic action can restore hope and dignity. That experience has fueled my desire to contribute at a broader level-where I can help shape policies and initiatives that make a lasting impact.

Professionally, I've built a career in real estate since 2017, guiding over 400 families through one of life's most important transitions. That work has taught me the value of listening, problem-solving, and advocating for others-skills I'm eager to bring to the board. Personally, I'm a family-first kind of person with a strong sense of purpose. I believe in kindness, inclusivity, and recognizing the worth in every individual.

Serving on the board would allow me to blend my professional experience, personal values, and community leadership in a way that supports our shared mission-and helps ensure that every voice has a seat at the table.
