Tell us a little bit about yourself. Please include any community involvement or personal philosophy.	I was born and raised on the east side of Oklahoma City, and I carry a deep love for this community everywhere I go. I graduated from the University of Central Oklahoma, and today I'm a proud mom, entrepreneur, and real estate professional with a heart for people and a passion for building something meaningful. My love for historic homes started when I was a kid, spending time at my grandparent's beautiful old home in Lincoln Terrace. Those memories sparked something in me-a desire to preserve legacy, honor the past, and build toward the future. That inspiration is what drives me in real estate today. I'm not just working to build a business; I'm building a legacy grounded in service, connection, and community impact. Before stepping into real estate, I spent nine years working with the Oklahoma Department of Human Services, serving some of the most vulnerable people in our state. That experience taught me the power of advocacy, empathy, and showing up for others-values I still carry with me every day. I truly believe that real estate is about more than transactions-it's about people, opportunity, and helping others create the lives they dream of. My mission is to be a resource, an advocate, and a voice for my community, while continuing to grow and give back in every way I can.

What motivated your desire to serve on the OKCMAR board?

What motivated my desire to serve on the OKCMAR Board is my deep love for the Oklahoma City community and my passion for serving others. Real estate is more than a career to me-it's a way to help individuals and families build their futures. I'm committed to using my voice and experience to help shape a more inclusive, forward-thinking industry that reflects the heart and diversity of our city. By serving on the board, I hope to give back, stay actively involved in advocating for our members, and help lay the groundwork for continued growth, collaboration, and service in our market.
